

Artist's Spotlight

Welcome to ARama Silks & Crafts

Artist's Spotlight.

We like to give the opportunity for known and unknown arts to show their work on our site. Some of the works are for sale and others are just to exhibit. We will constantly add to our collection so make sure you watch regularly for new art and artist on the scene.

If you like anything you see and would like to purchase something please contact us at aramasilk@yahoo.com. Or go to contact on the homepage on this site.

If you are an artist and would like to exhibit please contact us aramasilk@yahoo.com.

Artist: Launa Cresswell

Medium: Oil on Canvas

Title:

Price:

Artist: Launa Cresswell

Medium: Acrylic on watercolor paper

Title:

Price:

Size:

Artist: Launa Cresswell

Medium: Oil drafting film

Title:

Price:

Size:

Artist: Launa Cresswell

Medium: Pen & ink on paper

Title:

Price:

Size:

Artist: Launa Cresswell

Medium: box mosaic

Title:

Price:

Size:

Artist: Launa Cresswell

Medium: Silver & Lapis

Title:

Price:

Size:

Artist: Launa Cresswell

Medium: Glass

Title: Glass designs

Price: See Sales

Size: 15 x 15 cm

The following designs are glass created in a unique mosaic style.

All the works are one of a kind.

if you enjoy the collection

you can find them on sale

in our Limited Edition section,

in our online sales.

Photographs

The Photographer Michele Black has produced the following collection of photos.

Michele is a very talented individual inspired by her travels in Tibet.

These works capture everyday life in a unique and mesmerizing way.

We look forward to showing more of her breathtaking shots in the near future.

Watching the Show

A Khampa man relaxes on the grass taking in the soft afternoon warmth of summer. He quietly watches the dancers who celebrate this year's horse festival.

Each summer Tibetans gather together for the annual horse festival. The festival usually lasts for 4-5 days and includes many festivities, games, trick riding, dancers, folk tales and of course a race to find the fastest horse in the valley.

The winner, along with the prestige of having the fastest horse around, receives some ornate embroidered cloth and prize money.

Afternoon Tea

The earthen stove boils water for never-ending tea. Life in a black tent is simple with few luxuries. All contents are to be packed onto yaks and taken to greener pastures with the changing seasons.

Traditionally Tibetans are nomadic peoples. They must travel to find enough food for their yaks, sheep and goats, which provide virtually everything that they need to, sustain life, food, clothing and shelter. The tent is made from woven yak hair and the fuel for cooking is made from dried yak dung. Nothing is wasted in this land.

Heavenly Palms

A very calm body of water reflects the velvety green landscape near Tachika (Si Qu), Sichuan China, in the Kham region of Easter Tibet.

The image of two hands pressed together in prayer didn't occur to me at the time I was taking this photo.

I was merely mesmerized by the mirror like Quality Of the lake.

Birds' Eye View

Looking down on the valley below (4200m) at the Mipham monastery built 400 years ago, I felt as if I would be taken by the wind. I was three hours above this ancient spot, for that's as long as it took me to reach the highest point directly above.

(Still recovering from a recently broken foot, this was no easy task... some goats were my inspiration.)

Prayer flags attached to large posts extend all the way down to the monastery grounds below and north across the cravass to the next mountain. It truly amazes me, the lengths a Tibetan will go to show their devotion.

Soaring Shadow

An eagle soars over the inner courtyard casting an afternoon shadow on the prayer flags of the Bebung Monastery situated in the mountain valleys an hour west of Dege (rhymes with reggae) in eastern Tibet.

Walkabout

Tibetan lamas parade around Mipham Monastery, located in the Kham region of Eastern Tibet, in their colorful robes on a bright summer afternoon after studying inside the newly rebuilt, but dimly lit interior. They study

Buddhist scripture twice daily under the gaze of the thousand eyes, thousand armed Buddha of Compassion.

